

FRANKFORT MAYOR CURBS SPEEDING

LENOX MAN IN SHOOTING AFFAIR

After an intensive two-month search, Will County deputies last Wednesday night arrested Fred "Eric" Erickson, New Lenox munitions worker, who had been sought for the shooting of Mrs. John Spuehler, 58 years old, of Haven avenue, New Lenox, on March 29.

Chief Deputy Gilbert Knater, following the arrest, revealed that deputies had searched all over the state for Erickson, and that just a week before in Rock Island, Erickson had eluded officers by a matter of minutes.

A warrant was issued for Erickson's arrest, following the shooting of Mrs. Spuehler, which was believed to have occurred as Erickson sought to force his divorced wife to return to live with him. She had fled to the Spuehler home for refuge when he chased her on the night of March 29, and a bullet he fired at his wife penetrated the wall of the Spuehler house and striking Mrs. Spuehler.

Wednesday night, Deputies Axel Nelson, Ben Suva and George Baentelli went to New Lenox to accompany Mrs. Erickson to the Grommon school where their son, Irving, was to be graduated. She had asked for this protection, because she suspected her husband would again molest her, she told the officers.

Returning from the school following the exercises, Baentelli sat in the automobile in front of the house in which Mrs. Erickson resides. Deputies Nelson and Suva hid in the weeds nearby.

A car drove up and Erickson got out. The deputies ordered him to halt, but he fled down the street. Baentelli fired a shot in the air, and Erickson then ceased his resistance and submitted to arrest.

Erickson was taken to the county jail; arraigned before Justice Edgar H. Johnson on charges of assault with intent to kill and his bail was fixed at $5000, the case being continued for ten days.

State's Attorney James E. Burke is determining whether to hold him for action by the next grand jury.

Following the shooting, Mrs. Spuehler was taken to Silver Cross hospital. She is now home convalescing from the severe leg wounds which she suffered.

At the time of the attack, Mrs. Erickson said she was returning home when her former husband followed her up the street, molesting and attempting to persuade her to return to live with him. To get away from him, she ran to the Spuehler home to use the telephone to call police aid, and then the shooting took place.

MILDRED KOVAR A

The home was beautifully decorated in pink and white. An arch shaped lattice decorated with pink roses and paper formed the setting for the couple. Rev. Waltermer of Chicago Heights assisted by Mr. La Bue of Lincoln Estates performed the ceremony.

The bride was becomingly dressed in a white lace and georgette floor-length dress, with a full-length veil. She carried a bouquet of white roses and white sweet peas.

Miss Frances Novak, cousin of the bride served as bridesmaid and was attired in pink with silver accessories. Her bouquet was of pink roses.

Mr. Frank Kovar, brother of the bride was the best man.

At 5 o'clock dinner was served to the immediate families. The young couple will make their future home with the groom's parents just south of town.

ORLAND PARK CONSIDERS
4 YEAR HIGH SCHOOL

Shrinking Non-high School District territories cannot help but mean higher taxes. Non-high school territory is dwindling rapidly. On every hand communities are voting their own districts. Stickney, Beecher, Crete, and Peotone have completed such organizations in the past year and Mokena and Manhattan have plans under consideration now. These districts, like our own, are comparatively sparsely populated and yet have relatively high tax raising valuations and have taken this means to avoid the unfair burden of helping support such densely populated areas with low taxing ability as Elmwood Park and other similar localities. With the rapid shrinking of non-high school territory in the high revenue and sparsely populated areas and the consequent demand for more non-high school district support in the other areas, non-high school operating costs and taxes have been increasing annually. This year's taxes are nearly 20 per cent higher than last year's and may be legally increased another 20 per cent without the vote of the people. Present trends indicate that non-high school taxes will be higher still. Furthermore, because of inadequate income the present indebtedness of $1,155,000 against the Non-high School District of Cook County has already been re-funded and another bond issue is scheduled to be spread in July. The present 18c special levy on this indebtedness will no doubt have to be increased next year.

Some of the schools in surrounding territories that our Non-high School District money has helped to build and equip are LaGrange, Argo, Blue Island and Harvey, Orland and Palos Townships have, according to estimates, paid more than $200,000 in high school taxes during the past ten years and at present rates, would pay in excess of $360,000 more in the next ten years. Will there be anything locally to show for this half million dollars?

The proposed district would include all of Orland and Palos Townships except the portion of District 116 in Palos lying Northwest of the Sanitary District canal.

A survey of the anticipated revenue shows that no tax increase would be needed to finance the proposed new district. The experience during the past year of the fine new Crete high school proves that the present Non-high School levy ($1.00 per $100.00 of assessed valuation) would be amply adequate to support a highly commendable program in the proposed Orland-Palos High School. The combined assessed valuation of the two townships is in excess of $3,600,000 and the collections exceed 85 per cent which would provide a high school income of approximately $31,000 which is $10,000 more than the amount that the new Crete High School spent in furnishing its excellent program to an enrollment of 150 students. This income should be sufficient to not only carry equipment, employ superior type teachers, and reduce taxes at the discretion of its board of education.

One hundred and sixty-three non-high school permits were issued this year in the proposed new district. Indicated increase suggests that the district would be liable for the education of 180 high school students next year. Assuming that 40 of these elected to finish in their present schools, this would leave 140 to be accommodated locally. Probably 10 or more students from surrounding non-high territory would apply for enrollment, which of course would mean additional revenue. It is therefore reasonable to expect an enrollment of in excess of 150 students the

Quick Action Saves
Beagley Farm From Disasterous Fire

The presence of mind of Fred Arnold saved the dwelling and farm buildings on the Wm. Beagley farm on 159th street in Orland township from being destroyed by fire last Thursday morning about nine o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. Arnold were driving west on 159th street and noticed a cloud of white smoke blowing toward the road from the Beagley farm. On coming closer they saw a granary on fire. They drove in the yard, but no one was home. Mr. Arnold kicked the door of the house in and quickly called up the Orland Park Fire Dept.

The burning granary was between the house and a big barn. Mr. Arnold next closed the doors of the barn to prevent sparks from setting the hay afire. In the meantime Mrs. Arnold called the Tinley Park Fire Dept., from the Beagley home and in a few minutes both fire departments were on the scene. The granary was beyond saving, so the firemen directed their efforts to saving the farm house and other buildings.

The new fire truck of the Orland Park Fire Department gave a very good account of itself.

Cause of the fire is unknown. Mr. Beagley was in Orland in the barbershop of Mr. Helenhouse when the fire call came in and followed the Orland fire truck to his farm.

The loss is covered by insurance in the Green Garden Fire Insurance Co.

TINLEY GIRL
MEETS TRAGIC
DEATH IN LAKE

Miss Louise Richards, aged 12 years of Tinley Park met a tragic death last Saturday afternoon in a lake in the Boeyer woods east of Tinley Park. In company with her sister Martha and a group of other young folks she had been swimming in the lake nearly all afternoon. About 5:30 p.m., she started to swim back to shore from a resting point in the center of the lake, when to the surprise and horror of her sister and the other children she suddenly disappeared beneath the waters of the lake.

Mr. Brady who resides in the vicinity of the lake was notified of the mishap. The Tinley Park Fire Department was called, also the inhalator squad of the Midlothian Fire Department. Mr. Brady, James English of the Tinley Park Fire Department and other men waded in the lake and finally located the body and she was hurriedly taken out of the water and every means of resuscitation was used. Dr. Carmichael of Tinley Park was also summoned.

It is said that there was no water in the lungs and it is presumed she suffered a sudden heart attack.

She was taken to the Oak Forest Infirmary hospital, but was dead upon arrival. She was in the water about 20 minutes it is thot before the body was found.

The inquest was held Monday morning in the Hirsch Funeral Home in Tinley Park.

Funeral services were held from the Tinley Park Methodist church Tuesday afternoon with Rev. L. E. Weinreich officiating. Burial was in the Tinley Park Cemetery.

Surviving are the mother, Mrs. Frank Cushman, one sister, Martha, and two step brothers and her step father Frank Cushman.

The deceased was a member of the Tinley Methodist church and had also attended the Tinley Park public school. She was loved and well liked by all who knew her and had a very lovable disposition which endeared her to all who knew her.

Her school mates contributed a beautiful floral offering.

Mr. John Boeyer owner of the lake and woodland where the tragedy occurred was greatly shocked and deeply grieved. Mr. Boeyer has never given the public permission to swim in the lake on his private property. He feels very badly about this terrible accident, especially in view of his constant warnings to children not to go in swimming. Mr. Boeyer would certainly appreciate it, if people showed more respect for the "no trespassing" signs which are posted at every entrance to his property. He would also appreciate it, if the parents would co-operate in keeping their children out of his woods.

CHICAGO PROFESSOR
WARNS AGAINST WAR PROPAGANDA

Prof. Anton J. Carlson of the University of Chicago gave a very stirring address at the Frankfort school gym Memorial Day afternoon in which he set forth that during his life time of service to find a method of curing human ills and suffering and making researches to find cures for certain diseases, he has found it very difficult to raise money to carry on this work, money has been slow coming in mostly in dribble lots of dimes, nickles and dollars, but on the other hand when a drive is made to kill off humanity by the thousands and millions, then money is raised in millions and billions to cause misery and death. Prof. Carlson warned we must stay out of Europe's perennial wars.

Swears Out
Warrants For Two Offenders

Mayor George Sangmeister of Frankfort has cracked down on reckless driving and speeding in that village and last Wednesday morning he caused the arrest of two young men.

These boys in question have been making it a habit of speeding thru the main streets of the village at midnight, blowing auto horns, turning corners on two wheels with the brakes screeching, disturbing the citizens rest and endangering life as well as limb. Many complaints were made to Mayor Sangmeister who decided to take a personal hand in the matter.

Wednesday morning at about 12:45 he set forth on his one man crusade against the speeders. He carried a red lantern, and had barely started out when he heard a car coming at high speed on the main street. He attempted to flag the driver who was weaving from one side of the street to the other and who just missed hitting the mayor, who says it was the closest he came to being killed. It was just luck for the driver that he did not hit the mayor and thus was saved from being a murderer.

Mayor Sangmeister recognized the lad and his auto license number, at once swore out a warrant for the arrest of the 21 year old lad who is employed at the Wilmington munition plant. He was arranged before Police Magistrate J. C. Knight who gave the youth a severe reprimand and assessed a fine of $22.

The other lad, aged 17 of the Lincoln Estates who is employed on a farm near Tinley Park, also failed to obey the Mayor's command to stop, but instead made smart remarks, such as "it would take more than your car to catch me" and "I have slept in better places than Frankfort's jail". He too, found out that Mayor Sangmeister meant business when the latter swore out a warrant for the young man's arrest charging him with reckless driving and speeding. He too, was arranged before Police Magistrate Knight who after reprimanding the young offender, fined him $15. Not having the money to pay the fine, the car was taken from him and stored in the Baugh garage in Frankfort. Police Magistrate retained the car key.

After realizing that they could be arrested without first being caught, the young lads appeared very tame before the law and broke down and cried.

Deputy Sheriff Wm. Knippel of Frankfort served the warrants.

Mayor Sangmeister is to be very highly commended for his interest in the village and for his bravery in doing this work in making the village a safe place to dwell. (We hope this has taught a lesson to all young or older people who would drive recklessly and not consider the safety of others.)

Mokena Audience Told
We Must Hold On To What We Have

Wilbur Helm of Chicago, former Harvard professor pointed out in his Memorial Day address in Mokena that the people of America must hold on to what they have. If our liberties and our way of life disappears it will never return. He stated that this is a Republic and not a democracy, for mob rule is associated with the latter in a certain sense. At the close of the exercises at the school the concluding ceremonies were held at the Pioneer Memorial Cemetery.

Musical Tea

The advance piano pupils of Esther Fields Davies of Joliet will be presented by her at a Musical Tea Sunday afternoon at 2:15 o'clock in the Richards Street Methodist church in Joliet. Assisting talent will be Elizabeth Davies Dyrstrup and Erma Kemner Richards who will render vocal duets.

Those from Mokena appearing on the program will be: Marjorie Marti, Alcarla Bender, Shirley Marti, John Fox, Helen Cappel, Ada and Adeline Semmler, Jean Shevlin, Margaret Theil and Mary Catharine Reid.

All friends and those who are interested in good music are invited to attend. There is no admission charge. Tea will be served to all in the church parlors following the program.

St. Lawrence Seaway Plan Would Open Great Lakes Ports to Ocean Shipping

NEW YORK.—More than 70 per cent of the world's merchant shipping will be able to enter Great Lakes ports if the St. Lawrence seaway project is approved by congress. Only 67 miles of canals are needed to open a 2,350-mile waterway into the heart of North America.

Vessels with a draft of less than 14 feet are now able to enter the lakes, but their small size has greatly limited their cargo carrying capacity. Proponents of the project assert that it would prove a valuable aid in national defense.

The St. Lawrence seaway was approved on March 21 by a joint board of engineers and diplomats representing Canada and the United States. Congress is expected to accept or reject their agreement in the near future.

Test Borings Made.

Since November, 1940, United States army engineers have been working in the International Rapids section of the river, making surveys and test borings and drawing up plans. Construction work can begin soon after congress and the Canadian parliament approve the agreement.

The job to be done immediately will cost $266,170,000. It consists of damming the St. Lawrence at the foot of the International Rapids, where the river drops nearly 90 feet in 48 miles. A control dam would be built some 40 miles up the river to regulate the level of Lake Ontario and provide an even flow of water into the deep pool created by the main dam near Massena, N. Y.

A canal with a minimum depth of 27 feet, equipped with locks, would be built on the American side. Powerhouses would be built under the main dam, and would produce approximately 2,200,000 horsepower, making the St. Lawrence hydro-electric development the largest in North America with the exception of Grand Coulee in the state of Washington.

Completion of this project, which will take about four years, will remove the last important obstacle to deep water traffic from Great Lakes ports to the Atlantic. With a few other minor channel improvements and canal enlargements a seaway extending 2,350 miles into the heart of the continent, from the Atlantic to Duluth, Minn., and which will accommodate any vessels of 25-foot draft or less, will be completed.

Save Freight Charges.

A recent survey by the department of commerce indicates that approximately 70 per cent of the world's freight vessels would be able to use the seaway, and that it will save $80,000,000 a year in freight charges to shippers of the Middle West.

The International Rapids section of the St. Lawrence is the largest undeveloped source of waterpower remaining in North America. It has the further advantage of being located near the heart of the United States' biggest manufacturing centers, where factories already are importing power from Canada, and where residential consumers' rates are among the highest in the nation. The project itself is not a new one. Ever since 1895 Canada and the United States have worked together at the job of making the Great Lakes, their connecting channels, and their outlet, the St. Lawrence, economic assets to the continent. Canada completed the biggest link in 1932 with the opening of the Welland canal, enabling freight vessels to by-pass Niagara Falls, which was the chief navigation obstacle up to that time.

Great Lakes ports would be made available to seagoing ships in four or five years if the St. Lawrence seaway is approved by congress. The map above graphically illustrates the work required to complete the project.

Small Canadian canals on the St. Lawrence now carry freight direct from the Great Lakes to the sea, but their minimum depth of 14 feet limits traffic to small vessels. Nevertheless these shallow canals have been operated at capacity for several years, carrying some 9,000,000 tons of freight last year. The new seaway will be limited in capacity only by its canal and locks system, but it is estimated that it will carry at least 25,000,000 tons of cargoes annually.

Roosevelt Supports Project.

President Roosevelt has urged the immediate construction of the St. Lawrence development as a necessity for continental defense. Shipyards in the protected waters of the Great Lakes could produce a large percentage of the warships needed for the two-ocean navy, and cargo-carriers of every type. Lakes shipyards have the further advantage of being nearer to the source of steel and other materials, it is pointed out.

The national need for more electric power already has brought about an increase of production at Boulder dam, Bonneville, TVA, Grand Coulee, and other big hydro-electric plants. The President recently pointed out that St. Lawrence power is badly needed particularly to produce more aluminum.

Even though the St. Lawrence development would not be completed for four years, it is pointed out in Washington, it still would be in operation before many of the other defense projects are finished.

Another defense factor recently advanced is that the seaway will provide a protected supply line for the new defenses which the United States is building on Newfoundland, which guards the mouth of the St. Lawrence. Newfoundland is an island approximately as large as the state of Pennsylvania. The St. Lawrence discharges the waters of the St. Lawrence into the Atlantic through two channels, one on either side of Newfoundland.

Newfoundland is accessible only by water or air. For several centuries military tacticians of every nation have regarded the St. Lawrence valley as the logical "invasion route" into North America. Strong bases at Newfoundland, supplied from the interior by a protected water route, military men say, will block any possible invasion of North America's "vulnerable waist line."

In peacetime, proponents of the project point out, the seaway will give mid-western agriculture and industry the benefit of water-haul freight rates to any port in the world.

'Voting Is Patriotic,' NCTC Leader Says

Ballots Help Nation More Than Knitting Needles, Women Advised.

CHICAGO.—The American woman's right to vote, gained two years after the close of World War I, now for the first time provides her with an opportunity to be more than a "back-seat driver" during a period of national peril, Mrs. Melville Muckelstone, president of the National Consumers Tax commission, declares.

In a message to the 2,500 units of her organization in 43 states, the former national president of the American Legion Auxiliary, said that "if we women seize our opportunity, we shall find the ballot a far more effective tool to use in patriotic service than the knitting needle ever was."

"A crying need in the U. S. is thoroughgoing improvement of state and local governments," Mrs. Muckelstone said. "By cutting costs and lowering local taxes, such improvements would make it far easier for the taxpayer to bear the national defense burden."

Declaring that "this is an important job which the men, in the main, have left undone," she urged "organized women" to adopt a 10-point program for civic betterment and then to "put the program through." This is possible, she said, because since the adoption of the Nineteenth Amendment on August 26, 1920, women have had the franchise.

The 10 points proposed are as follows:

For municipalities and counties—(1) adoption of a budget plan, (2) preparation of an understandable annual report, (3) reduction of debt, (4) adoption of centralized purchasing, (5) adoption of the merit system, (6) preparation and adoption of a long-term plan; for counties—(7) centralization of authority, (8) consolidation of small counties; for states—(9) elimination of state trade barriers, (10) reorganization of state administrative machinery.

"Adoption of any of these 10 points would result in greater governmental efficiency, and therefore in lower tax levies. Yet not one would curtail any essential governmental service," Mrs. Muckelstone added.

"Moreover, not one of the suggestions is experimental—all have been tried, tested and found successful."

"In August American women will celebrate the twenty-first anniversary of the passage of the Nineteenth Amendment. By pressing such a program as this in local governments, they will demonstrate that they have 'come of age' politically."

Advisability of a negotiated peace now is questionable... Defense industry strikes form one of Washington's biggest problems.

(Bell Syndicate—WNU Service.)

WASHINGTON.—It is interesting to examine the logic that is governing the isolationists in the senate, whether one agrees with it or not.

For instance, take Sen. Burton K. Wheeler, of Montana. He was kidded by some friends the other day as to his present motives.

"Listen," said Wheeler, indignantly, "I am doing what I am doing because my conscience will not let me do anything else."

"We ought to have peace right now, and there is no reason why we should not have it. There has never been a time when Germany was not willing to make peace without disturbing the integrity of the British empire—if one excepts the African colonies."

There are two flies in this ointment, as his friends hastened to point out. One is that a peace now would leave Australia and New Zealand at the mercy of another Axis partner, Japan. The Australians are very frank about this. They think they sink or swim with the British empire. If Britain goes down, the Anzacs think that it would be only a question of time before they would be overrun by the Japanese.

HITLER'S PROMISES WORTHLESS

The other fly is that unfortunately for the prospects for any negotiated peace, no one in high position in any country is willing to trust Hitler. He makes no bones about his plans to break any promise whenever it should be to the interest of Germany, as he sees it, to do so.

It has been pointed out frequently that if Hitler had kept his word pledged at Munich, he could have taken the Polish corridor without plunging Europe into the second World war. In fact there is reasonable certainty that he could have gotten back the African colonies that belonged to Germany up to 1914.

But instead of keeping his word pledged at Munich, Hitler seized the rest of Czechoslovakia shortly thereafter. Hence when it came to the Polish corridor the British and French could not believe him.

So that promising to leave Britain intact now would not carry any real assurance to the British people. They would rather fight it out now than live in fear through an armistice.

Congressmen Discuss Defense Industry Strikes

Just how long the patience of Franklin D. Roosevelt is going to last about this business of strikes in the national defense industries is the biggest question mark in Washington today.

The President knows that his figures about the small percentage of workers involved in national defense strikes are misleading. He knows that the difference between 1,000 planes and 1,500 planes produced in a month, may mean the difference between victory and defeat—between winning the war and losing it. In fact, it is entirely possible that the difference between the production of 1,000 planes and 1,002 planes would be decisive.

Military experts have often argued that if the Confederates had possessed a dozen breech loading cannon at Gettysburg, instead of only two, they would have won that battle and the war. They could have shelled the Union forces off that ridge instead of letting Pickett lead his men to slaughter and repulse.

HITLER BREAKS PROMISES

Feeling in Congress is getting hotter and hotter about the situation. "An editorial in the Detroit Times," Rep. George A. Dondero of Michigan, said on the floor of the house, "truthfully said that strikes in our defense production plants constituted the bottleneck out of which 'we may try to pull our head when it is too late, as was the case in France, which lost her war with Germany, mainly because she would not inaugurate compulsory arbitration in her defense industries.'"

"That paragraph," Mr. Dondero continued, "ought to be pasted above the desk of every member of congress. It ought to be read every night in every home in this broad, free land of ours. There is no guarantee that it may not become a prophecy unless we face this problem honestly, frankly, and wisely."

Mr. Dondero quoted further from this same editorial: "We either have not the power—or will not use the power—to order peace in our defense industries, to order compulsory arbitration of all differences in those matters that aim straight at our vitals—strikes which are so evidently fomented by Communists."

"We are actually now," Mr. Dondero continued, "in the process of demanding from the youth of our land the supreme sacrifice if necessary, yet we continue to temporize with a situation which constitutes a greater danger to the defense and security of this nation than if whole divisions of those brave young boys were stricken by plague."

Three Signs Which Point To Flat Feet

By DR. JAMES W. BARTON
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

YOU read so much about weak flat feet that when you have the slightest pain in the feet you may wonder if you need arch supports and perhaps straightaway purchase a pair. Now, arch supports are of great help when they are needed as they make it possible for these individuals to earn a living and get about for business and pleasure.

TODAY'S HEALTH COLUMN

However, the wearing of arch supports should be left until it is definitely known that they are really needed and when measures to correct the arches have failed.

We should realize that the foot is an organ of the body just as is the stomach or heart and the cause of any ache or discomfort should be investigated. Infected tonsils or teeth can cause pain in the joints and tendons of the foot just as in other joints—wrist, knee or shoulder. Infection can cause pain in a flat foot; treatment of the foot itself may give little or no relief.

What are the signs of a flat foot? There are three outstanding signs that the patient can see for himself:

1. He stands on a large sheet of white paper and outlines his feet with a pencil. If left foot is flat, the inner side is down on the floor and bulges to right. If the right foot is flat, inner side bulges to left. In the normal foot the arch of the foot is entirely off the floor, the left curving to left and the right curving to right.

2. If right foot is flat, outer edge curves inward to the left, instead of outward to right; if left foot is flat outer edge curves inward to right instead of outward to left.

3. In a normal foot, the large tendon which raises the heel bone upward off floor runs straight downward to heel bone. If left foot is flat, this tendon turns outward to left; if right foot is flat, this tendon turns outward to right.

How Much Water Should We Drink?

MANY professional heavyweight wrestlers who wrestle three or four times a week, may take off as much as 10 pounds each time they wrestle and have the 10 pounds back when they wrestle again the following night. It can be readily seen that the 10 pounds lost was not fat, it was water.

The reason the weight goes back on so readily is that fat tissue absorbs or holds water just as does a sponge, whereas more active tissue such as muscle or nerve, will only take in or absorb the amount of water needed to maintain the structure of this tissue.

We are advised by health specialists to drink more water; they state that most of us do not drink enough water, which is a cause of constipation and acidosis.

How much water should the average office worker, housewife, or clerk drink in the 24 hours?

Physiologists tell us that for every calorie of food eaten we need 1 c.c. (15 drops) of water, so that if we ate 2,000 calories we should need 2,000 times 15 drops, that is nearly three pints or six glasses. However, as meats contain over 50 per cent of water and green vegetables over 90 per cent, it is estimated that we get at least half of our six glasses in the food, so that we need to drink only three glasses of water daily. If we drink tea, coffee, milk or other fluid at each meal, it explains why many individuals remain in good health who do not drink any liquids between meals.

As a matter of fact, most of us eat nearer 3,000 calories per day than 2,000, so that about two quarts, eight glasses of water, is supplied by the food eaten.

Generally speaking, keeping in mind that we sometimes do considerable walking or take other exercise daily and often perspire freely, most of us would do well if we drank one or two glasses of water daily between meals. Water cannot harm us. It will, of course, increase weight in fat individuals.

QUESTION BOX

Q.—What causes pernicious anemia and how could it be prevented?

A.—Generally speaking, ordinary anemia is a decrease in the iron in the red cells of the blood. Pernicious anemia is a decrease in the iron and also in the number of cells.

Q.—Do you know of any cure for lateral amyotrophic sclerosis?

A.—There is no known cure for lateral amyotrophic sclerosis, hardening of certain parts of the spinal cord.

Was It but a Suggestion From Exhausted Clerk?

Frock after frock had been displayed to the lady with the supercilious air, until the salesperson in the exclusive dress shop was on the point of nervous exhaustion.

The customer would inspect each dress and then make biting remarks about most of them. At last she looked around the devastated place with an overbearing glance and complained:

"All your frocks are so skimpy. I believe I would look better in something flowing."

The tired clerk was quick to seize the opening.

"Madam might try the river," she said coldly.

Army Survey Reveals Appropriate Gifts for Soldiers

CHICAGO.—To answer many requests for suggestions of appropriate gifts to send soldiers in the expanding army of the United States, the Headquarters Sixth Corps area in Chicago has conducted a survey among chaplains, morale officers and enlisted men.

From a soldier's point of view, it was agreed that any gifts for his personal comfort and enjoyment were acceptable. It was suggested, however, that gifts be small and easily portable. Heavy and bulky gifts are not desirable because the soldier might find it inconvenient or even impossible to take them with him if he is transferred to a different camp. "Desirable" gifts cover a large range of articles from subscriptions to home newspapers and personal apparel.

All gifts should be well-marked and properly addressed, giving the rank of the receiver, as well as the camp, company and post office.

THE SMOKY YEARS

By ALAN LE MAY W.N.U. Release

INSTALLMENT 13 THE STORY SO FAR:

Dusty King and Lew Gordon had built up a vast string of ranches. King was killed by his powerful and unscrupulous competitor, Ben Thorpe. Bill Roper, King's adopted son, was determined to avenge his death in spite of the opposition of his sweetheart.

A shiver ran the length of Jody Gordon's body. Casually, as if they were talking about getting breakfast these quiet-faced men were speaking of a proposed death—the death of a boy who had once been very close to her, and very dear. Suddenly she was able to glimpse the power and the depth of the animosity behind the mission of these men. No effort and no cost would seem to Ben Thorpe too great if in the end Bill Roper was struck out of existence.

"Jim," the younger rider said soberly, "if Roper's got his wild bunch with him—Jim, it's such a fight as none of us have ever gone into yet! When you stop to think that any time—a minute—a bunch of 'em may land in here—"

"Charley's on lookout," Jim Leathers shrugged. "We'll know in plenty time."

A silence fell, a long silence. Heavy upon Jody Gordon was the panic of an open-space creature held helpless within close walls. Her voice was low and bitter. "You're set on holding me here?"

"No call to put it that way," Jim Leathers said mildly, almost gently. But his eyes denied that mildness, so that behind him Jody sensed again the vast animosity built by the Texas Rustlers' War.

"I want a flat answer," Jody said bravely. "Are you going to give me a horse, or not?"

Once more Jim Leathers' canine teeth showed in his peculiarly unpleasant grin. "Hell, no," he said.

CHAPTER XVIII

Perhaps Lew Gordon should have known that if Bill Roper learned of Jody's disappearance at all, Roper would come directly to him.

And, knowing this, he should have prepared himself. But Lew Gordon had not met Roper face to face in nearly two years; and nothing was farther from his mind than the possibility that Roper would walk in upon him now.

Upon this night Lew Gordon was pacing the main room of his little Miles City house; forty-eight hours had passed since his daughter's disappearance and the old cattleman had lashed himself into a state of repressed fury comparable to that of a trapped-battered mountain lion, or a goaded bear. Everything that could be done to locate his daughter was being done.

He knew that Jody's disappearance was voluntary, and he knew its purpose. The brief but highly informative note that Jody had left him told him that much. It simply said:

"One of you must be made to see reason. I am going to talk to Billy Roper myself."

What this did not tell him was where Roper was, or how Jody expected to find him. Impatient of mystery and delay, he could not understand why his many far-scattered cowboys could dig up no word. For all he knew, his daughter was by this time lost somewhere in the frozen wastes of snow, in immediate desperate need of help.

Lew Gordon sat alone for a little while. For the moment his helpless anger was burned down into a heavy weariness. His mind was full of his daughter, whom he persistently pictured as a little girl, much more of a child than she actually was any more.

Suddenly it struck him how curious it was that in this bare room in which he sat there was no sign of any kind that Jody had ever been here at all. This was partly because she had never lived here nor even been expected here; but it brought home to him sharply how much of his life had been given to cattle, how little to his daughter. It made him realize how little he knew his daughter, and how little he had ever given her of himself.

This was Lew Gordon's state of mind as the door thrust open, letting in a brief lash of wintry wind; and he wheeled in his chair to face the last man on earth he had expected to see.

Bill Roper shook a powdering of dry snow off the roll of his coat collar, then stood looking at Lew Gordon in a cool hard silence as he pulled off his gloves. Once this man had been almost a son to Lew Gordon—the adopted son, in actuality, of Lew Gordon's dead partner. But a definite enmity now replaced what a little while ago had been a friendship as deep and close as the variance in their ages could permit. All the meaning of their association, almost as long as Bill Roper's life, was gone, wiped out by those two smoky years since the death of Dusty King.

For a moment or two Lew Gordon stared at him in utter disbelief. Then he whipped to his feet.

"Where is she?" he demanded intensely, furiously. "What have you done with her?"

Bill Roper no longer looked like the youngster Dusty King had raised on the trail. His gray eyes looked hard and extremely competent, old

Jody Gordon, and her father. After wiping Thorpe out of Texas, Roper conducted a great raid upon Thorpe's vast herds in Montana. Roper left for Lew Gordon's home when told that Jody had disappeared. Unable to reconcile her father with Roper, beyond his age, in a face so dark and lean-carved it was hard to recognize behind it the face of Dusty King's kid. He made no attempt to answer a question which was necessarily meaningless to him. He finished pulling off his gloves, unbuttoned his coat, and hooked his thumbs in his belt before he spoke.

"I heard yesterday that Jody has turned up missing," he said. "I came to Miles hell-for-leather to see if it's so. From what I could find out down in the town, no word has come in on where she is. If that's true, I don't aim to give my time to anything else until she's found."

"You mean to deny you know where she is?" Gordon shouted.

Roper's voice did not change. "You talk like a fool," he said.

Lew Gordon's eyes were savagely intent upon Roper's face; he was trying to discover if this man could be believed.

"You may be lying," he added at last, "and you may not, but I'll tell you this—you sure won't leave here till I find out where my girl is. You're wanted anyway, my laddie buck; there's a legal reward on your head, right now—and part of it was put up by me."

Lew Gordon's eyes were savagely intent on Roper's face.

"I heard that," Bill Roper said. "When I get ready to leave, I'll leave, all right. My advice to you is to begin using your head. I may be in a kind of funny position. But it puts me where I know things about the Montana range that neither you nor your outfits have got any clue to. If you want your daughter back you better figure to use what I know about the Deep Grass."

Lew Gordon compelled himself to temporize. What he couldn't get around was his own belief that Roper knew something definite, specific, about where Jody had gone—or had started out to go. He must have known also, in spite of the bluff to which anger had prompted him, that he could not hold Roper here when Roper decided to leave, nor force any information from him in any way whatever.

"What is it you want to know?" he asked at last, helpless, and angry in his helplessness.

"In the first place, I want to know what made you think Jody was with me?"

"You swear," Lew Gordon demanded, "you don't know the answer to that?"

"I don't swear anything," Roper said. "I asked you a question, Lew."

Lew Gordon hesitated. It was a good many years since anyone had talked to him in the tone Bill Roper took; but for once the purpose in hand outpowered the violence of his natural reaction. He turned from his litter of papers, and handed Bill Roper the little scrap of Jody's handwriting which was all she had left to indicate where she was gone.

"One of you must be made to see reason. I am going to talk to Billy Roper myself."

When Bill Roper had read that, the eyes of the two men met in hostile question.

"This looks mighty like a false lead, to me," Bill Roper said at last. "Like as if she aimed to cover up where she really went. Don't hardly seem likely she'd start out to come to me."

"I know she went looking for you because she said she did. My girl don't lie."

Roper shrugged. "Why should she do that?"

Jody had set out with Shoshone Wilce to find him. They were attacked by some of Thorpe's men hiding in Roper's shack. Wilce escaped but Jody was captured. The men decided to hold her as bait to bring Roper to them.

"It was your own man talked her into it," Gordon said with menace. "My own man? What man?"

"A little sniveler called Shoshone Wilce. Everybody knows he was a scout coyote for you, before Texas ever run you out."

"Nobody run me out of any place," Roper said; but his mind whipped to something else. It was true that he talked to certain men in the town before he had come here. Now suddenly he knew that he had learned what he had come to find out. He buttoned his coat, pulled on his gloves.

Gordon confronted him stubbornly. "I mean you shan't leave here without telling me what you know."

A glint of hard amusement was plain in Bill Roper's eyes. "I know what you've told me. But I'll add this onto it. I think you'll soon have back your girl. I'm walking out of here now, Lew, because it's time for me to look into a couple of things. But I'll be seeing you—if Thorpe don't get you first."

The veins stood out sharply on Lew Gordon's forehead, high-lighted by a faint dampness. "In all fairness I'll tell you this," he said. "It's true I can't lift a gun on you, or on any man who stands with empty hands. But as soon as you're out of that door, all Miles City will be on the jump to see you don't get loose. Twenty thousand hangs over your head, my boy!"

"Quite a tidy little nest egg," Roper agreed. "I'd like to have it myself."

A trick of the wind sent a great whirl of papers across the room as he went out.

He had not come here without providing that the horse which waited under his saddle was fresh and good. He struck westward now out of Miles City, unhurrying. At the half mile he found a broad cross trail where some random band of cattle had trampled the snow into a trackless pavement. He turned north in this, followed it for a mile, then swung northwest over markless snow. Now that this horse was warmed a little he settled deep in his saddle and pushed the animal into a steady trot; at that gait, even in the snow, he could expect the tough range-bred pony to last most of the night.

CHAPTER XIX

A tired horse is not much inclined to shy, toward the end of a long day's travel; and when Bill Roper's horse snorted and jumped sideways out of its tracks the rider looked twice, curiously, at the carcass which had spooked his pony. A dead pony on the winter range being a fairly common thing, he was about to ride on, when he noticed something about this particular dead pony which caused him to pull up and dismount for a closer examination.

After leaving Lew Gordon he had ridden deep into the night. Half an hour would bring him within sight of the Fork Creek rendezvous, and he was eager to push on, so that his deduction as to Jody's whereabouts might have a quick answer, one way or the other; but when he had examined the dead pony he was glad that he had checked.

This was no winter-killed pony. The bright trace of frozen blood that had first caught Roper's eye was the result of two gunshot wounds in neck and quarters.

A dark foreboding possessed Roper as he studied the dead pony. Roper himself was short-cutting through the hills, following no trail. The coincidence that he had stumbled upon the carcass in all those snowy wastes could be accounted for only in one way: both Roper and the pony had followed a line of least resistance through the hills—a line that had the Fork Creek rendezvous at its far end. His discovery told him that there had been fighting at Fork Creek within the last forty-eight hours. If he was right in believing that Jody had come to Fork Creek—

He remounted and swung northward, mercilessly whipping up his weary pony, but approaching the Fork Creek camp roundabout, behind masking hills and through hidden ravines. An hour passed before he threw down his reins and crept on hands and knees to the crest of a ridge commanding the valley of the Fork.

He moved a half mile closer and resumed his watch; but for some time he could make out nothing.

Then just as the sun set, three men moved out of the cabin. For a moment or two they stood in the snow close together. One went back into the cabin. The two others disappeared for a moment, to reappear mounted. They separated, and Roper watched them ride in opposite directions up the nearest slopes of the hills. These passed beyond his sight, but in another minute or two their ways were retraced by two other riders.

"Outposts," Roper decided. "Somebody's keeping a hell of a careful watch."

BEGINNING OF WORLD MISSIONS

LESSON TEXT—Acts 12:25-13:12.
GOLDEN TEXT—And he said unto them, Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature.—Mark 16:15.

Nineteen hundred years of "front line action" for Christ began that day in Antioch when the first missionaries of the cross were sent forth. There is no more thrilling story in all history than that of missions. The glorious thing is that it goes on year after year, and will do so as long as the Lord of the harvest continues to send forth workers. The writer of these notes is glad to be associated with a training center which in its half century of operation has prepared for service about 2,300 men and women who have been sent to the foreign field by their churches and missions, and of whom approximately 1,600 are still active on the field in spite of "peril, toil and pain."

Our lesson teaches us how "to fight the good fight of faith" (I Tim. 6:12). First we must have

I. The Base of Operations (vv. 1-3).

Every army must have a home base; just so, the army of the Lord looks to the home church, the local gathering of God's people. An army would fail if those at the base of its action were asleep, or so interested in the pleasures of this world, or so indifferent to their responsibility, that they would not work hard in support of the active army. So the cause of Christian missions cannot go ahead if it has to depend on a home church which is spiritually asleep, indolent, indifferent, and worldly minded.

The church at Antioch prayed and fasted. It ministered the Word of God. It was responsive to the guidance of the Holy Spirit and ready to sacrifice by giving its leaders to the missionary cause. Is your church that kind of a church? If not, why not?

Observe also that it is from such a church that God calls His workers. Sunday school teacher, you may have in your class next Sunday one of the missionary leaders of the next generation. See to it that the message from God reaches that heart.

II. Good Soldiers of the Cross (vv. 2-4).

The army does not call for the weak or physically handicapped to serve. Just so, God's service calls for the strongest men and women of the church, not the misfits or failures. A girl was once heard to remark: "If I can't get married, I will be a missionary." Fortunately for God's work, she did get married. Some men who cannot succeed in business think that means they should be missionaries.

God wants our best (Deut. 15:2) and He wants the best a church can give, which means the best spiritually, but in other ways as well. Note also in verses 3 and 4 that the messengers of the Lord must be constantly led of the Holy Spirit.

III. The Heat of Battle (vv. 5-10).

Warfare is not a Sunday school picnic. It means conflict with the forces of the enemy. So the missionary of the cross must be prepared to meet Satanic opposition. Saul and Barnabas met this "son of the devil" (by the way, reader, we trust you do not belong to that family) who opposed the work of grace which had begun in the heart of the governor (vv. 8-10).

However, there are those who do seek to hear the Word of God (v. 7) as did Sergius Paulus. The business of the missionary is to preach to them, but not only to them. The city of Paphos was really a miniature of the world of that day. It was a Greek city of high culture and low morals. It was ruled by the Roman governor, a man of noble character and a "man of understanding" (v. 7). But right with him was Elymas the sorcerer, a wicked and ungodly Jew, a disgrace to his own people and a hindrance to the work of God. The messenger of God rejoices in the opportunity to minister the Word, whether to Roman, Jew, or Greek, of high or low estate, wicked or good, interested or antagonistic. They all need God's Word.

IV. Victory for Christ (vv. 11, 12).

The army goes into battle with the purpose of winning a victory, or it is defeated before it starts. The Lord's army is on a victorious march, certain of success, because He that is in us is "greater than he that is in the world" (I John 4:4). In dealing with the sorcerer, Paul brought down the drastic judgment of God. Note that this was not done because Elymas opposed Paul, or because he had some different belief, but because he in his wickedness opposed God. Those who fight against God are in a losing battle, the victory is always on His side.

There was another kind of victory here, and the soldiers of the cross are (or should be) far more interested in that type of victory; namely, the surrender of a sinner at the foot of the cross. God won a victory in the heart of Sergius Paulus.

THE CALL FOR MORE EGGS
(Washington.—C. R. Wickard, secretary of agriculture, has announced a nation-wide drive to produce more eggs as part of the aid to England and defense plan. He sets the goal at 300,000,000 extra dozen eggs for the next 15 months.—News Item.)

Come on, hen!
Say when!
Don't be a cluck!
Don't pass the buck!
Hey!
Lay!
Today!

The call for more eggs. Across the country goes the call—The barnyards hear it, one and all; The message sweeps from east to west: "No longer, hen, your second best!"

A buzzer buzzes and it's done . . . A paper's signed in Washington . . . Stenographers rush here and there— There's action in the very air; Officials leap to telephones— The orders ring in solemn tones— The message flows from silver pens: A Proclamation to The Hens. In headlines big the news is played: "ALL POULTRY CALLED FOR ALL-OUT AID."

The wires 'cross the nation sing, An ultimatum's on the wing By horseback and by auto, too, By radio and by canoe, By every telegraphic loop To every henhouse and coop, "Come, hen, your country calls to you— One egg is not enough! Give two!"

The message whistles through the trees To startle birds and busy bees; It leaps across from farm to farm And spreads a "Hen" Revere alarm, "Awake! Get up! The goin's tough! Get up there, hen, and do your stuff!"

The chicken houses rock and sway To this one order, "Lay, hen, lay!" The roosts vibrate to one word—"Scram!"

As they're abandoned on the lam; The nests they seem to snap and creek As orders reach an all-time peak!

The hens outside now scamper in, Their faces drawn a little thin; "We've laid one egg" say three or four; The others answer "War is war!" Mayhap one sulks; she hears a "Boo!" And yell of "You appeaser you!"

Then looms some organizing hen (From Layers' Union Number 10); "Arise!"—her cry is loud and clear, "Demand the right to bargain here! Production speed is very nice, But are we hens or are we mice?"

Then Washington by hens is stormed And hencoop picket lines are formed; Hark! Overhead the transports dive, The mediation boards arrive!

But lest this tale be far too long The hens are saved; they ain't done wrong; They sign to do the best they can But scrap the big production plan.

Then to their nests they quickly scam And give three cheers for Uncle Sam, Three lusty cheers (and shake a leg)— Three cheers, ah yes, but just one egg!

That Nagging Backache
May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action

Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking—its risk of exposure and infection—throws heavy strain on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become over-taxed and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling—feel constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

Try Doan's Pills. Doan's help the kidneys to pass off harmful excess body waste. They have had more than half a century of public approval. Are recommended by grateful users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

Any business to be permanently successful must be founded on principles of honesty and fair dealing and full value for the price asked. From these there can be deviation, regardless of economics or any other conditions.

In such a period as the one thru which we have passed, manufacturers and merchants are confronted with many problems. In seeking the solution there is often strong provocation to resort to expedients that in normal times never would be considered. One cause of this temptation is the appearance on the market of sub-standard products put out to create so-called price competition.

J. L. Ferguson Co., started with an ideal. Thru good and bad that ideal has never been violated. To it all subsequent success must be credited. Here the public has at its disposal the services of people who possess knowledge and who obtained their modern business education in the school of practical experience. From the inception of the enterprise, quality has been maintained from the beginning.

J. L. Ferguson Co., is a local concern under competent management of people interested in local development and the firm's substantial and well merited progress is a matter of actual fact well known to the public.

One of the community's most necessary concerns is located in Joliet, phone 4761. So great has become the radio business of the nation that the modern radio station is an essential factor in every community of taste and refinement.

Station WCLS is the favorite station for both advertisers and audience in this part of the country, as it offers excellent service and its management, Mr. Holt, has made it extremely popular with its atmosphere of friendliness. Station WCLS is one of the most modern stations in the countryside. Aside from the very best equipment they have radio operators and broadcasters who are plainly understood in all announcements, no matter whether it is merely the market, baseball, or other events you will find that the voice of this station rings clear and distinct. Farmers and others in the surrounding territory greatly appreciate the service they offer as they are enabled to sit at home and listen in on all the major events that are transpiring in the world.

Commercial broadcasting over this station has become very popular among business men over this part of the state as well as national advertisers. When your business is broadcast here it will sit up and take notice, as it carries both the element of surprise and novelty which are valuable in advertising.

Their rates are reasonable and service is good. All you have to do is call them on the phone and they will arrange all the details. If you do not happen to have in mind subject matter for the occasion they will write it for you, furnish you the announcer or put you on the radio just as you desire.

"THAT GOOD CITIZENS BEER"
Order a Case Today.

There is all the difference in the world in the taste and quality, of beer, and not all beer is good beer. Like everything else, there are brewers whose sole aim is to make a delicious, true to the taste beer, and others who manufacture beer from a production standpoint only.

There is no question about the quality of Citizens Velvet beer made by Citizens Brewing Co. Dealers throughout this territory sell it in both bottle and on draught.

It is fine, old time beer, brewed in true fashion by skilled brewmasters, who learned and practiced the art for years before becoming sufficiently expert to direct the brewing of large quantities. The brewmaster's art is one of the oldest in the world, because the making of beer is several thousands of years old. It is believed that the Egyptians passed their brewing knowledge on to the Greeks and from this nation it spread all over Europe.

Joliet Citizen's Brewing Co., Inc., beer is brewed under the watchful eyes of the very best brewmasters available and the result of their efforts and the superior ingredients with which they are furnished answers in fine style demand of the most discriminating. Any business to be permanently successful must be founded on principles of honesty and fair dealing and full value for the price asked. From these there can be no deviation, regardless of economics or any other conditions.

Every successful business in the United States, the ones that have started from a small beginning and have endured year after year, are built on an ideal. That ideal has always included a self imposed obligation to keep faith with the public by maintaining quality and service the year around regardless of conditions.

The Ideal Burial Vault Co. started with an ideal. Through good and bad that ideal has never been violated. To it all subsequent success must be credited.

Here the public has at its disposal the services of people who possess the knowledge and who obtained their modern business education in the school of practical experience. From the inception of the enterprise, quality has been maintained from the beginning.

The Ideal Burial Vault Co. is a local concern under competent management of people interested in local development and the firm's substantial and well merited progress is a matter of actual fact well known to the public, we recommend them to all our readers.

A station sponsored by the Improvement association of Wooded Hills subdivision of North Palos will meet the 2nd Wednesday of each month from 10:30 A. M. to 12:30 P. M. in Schoenke Hall, 107th and 82nd Court, North Palos. Dr. Faulkner will be the physician in charge.

Mrs. Harold S. Kinney, in charge of the Red Cross Sewing program for the Orland District announces that there is urgent need for more garments, especially baby things. She has a supply of material for gowns, bonnets, booties and blankets that are very urgently required and asks that anyone who cares to assist in this work contact her at once. These materials are already cut and only require sewing and finishing and can be taken home and completed at the workers' leisure. This is a volunteer effort and it is hoped that as many Orland women as possible lend a few hours of their time to help in this worthy cause. Those desiring to help should contact Mrs. Kinney at Orland 57.

Mrs. Ray Doctor, general chairman of the Poppy Day Committee for the American Legion Auxiliary announces that the receipts from this year's sale of poppies exceeded that of last year and wishes to thank all the ladies who assisted in making the sale a success.

The Thomas Cooper family participated in the 12th Annual American Legion Pilgrimage to the Illinois Soldiers and Sailors Children School at Normal, Ill., last Sunday. They visited the Sherman Cottage which is maintained by the 8th District of the American Legion which is composed of Posts from the surrounding communities. They report that at this cottage there were 18 children, ranging in ages from 6 to 12 years.

The summer round-up committee of the Orland Park P. T. A. has about completed its survey. So far, nine children have been found that will enter school next fall and of this number five have already been examined and certified by Dr. Leavitt.

Mrs. Elmer Newton is still confined to bed following a fall in her home.

Mrs. Howard Spiess and her daughter returned Wednesday from Ingalls Memorial hospital in Harvey to the home of her mother Mrs. Joseph Creer.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our sincere thanks to the Orland and Tinley Park Fire Departments, and our many friends and neighbors for their quick response in helping us get under control the fire that recently destroyed our grainery. If it had not been for their prompt assistance, more damage might have occurred.

FILLED WITH SPICE 'N' EVERYTHING NICE . . .
(See Recipes Below)

REFRESHMENTS PLUS!

Summer nears. You think of lots of things—new, crisp, cool clothes . . . vacation trips . . . gardening . . . and yes, even parties, especially gay ones that all for a minimum of "home work."

I think I understand. You love to have people in your home. In spite of the warmth of June days, you want those of your friends who remain in town to drop by often for conversation, relaxation and refreshments. But, of course, you want what you serve to be easy to make, delicious, entirely different from anything that you've ever served before, and economical. In the last two of these points, I've found homemakers hold a unanimous opinion.

So today I'm going to give you what I think are ace-high ideas on easy entertaining. I'm sure you'll find the recipes worth trying.

Dessert bridge parties will do wonders to round up the "Mrs." crowd who feel free, after feeding hubby and the children, to don dress-up frocks and skip out for dessert and an afternoon of fun. If your friends don't play bridge, substitute another hobby, but the serving of dessert upon the arrival of guests can nevertheless be carried out.

Serving dessert when guests arrive gives the hostess lots of leeway. She doesn't have to keep in mind that her friends will be going home to dinner soon, as she does with later-on refreshments. And, she can provide a really filling dessert.

Pictured at the top of the column is a dessert which I'm sure will answer your desires. It's Tropical Gingerbread.

2 eggs
¾ cup brown sugar
¾ cup pure molasses
¾ cup melted shortening
2½ cups flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
1 cup boiling water
2 teaspoons ginger
1½ teaspoons cinnamon
½ teaspoon cloves
½ teaspoon nutmeg
½ teaspoon baking soda
½ teaspoon salt

Add beaten eggs to the sugar, molasses, and melted shortening; then add the dry ingredients which have been mixed and sifted, and lastly the hot water. Bake in small individual pans, or in a greased pan, in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) for 30 to 40 minutes. Top with whipped cream and sprinkle with shredded coconut.

With this dessert, you'll want to serve a beverage . . . coffee, tea or perhaps an iced drink of fresh fruit mixture.

Vanilla mousse is the basis for a number of appetizing desserts, and is a good party refreshment in itself. Among the many variations are peanut brittle and chocolate fudge mousses.

To make the vanilla mousse, fold one cup of confectioners' sugar and two teaspoons of vanilla into one quart of heavy cream that has been whipped. Fold in four egg whites which are stiffly beaten.

Spread the mousse into two large refrigerator ice trays and place in the freezing compartment of your refrigerator, or, freeze in your ice

LYNN SAYS:

In thinking of party foods, I remembered these few suggestions my mother passed on to me. Maybe you'll find them helpful.

To remove pecan meats whole, cover the shells with boiling water and let them stand until cold before cracking them.

Chocolate cakes usually call for unsweetened chocolate. This blends with the cake mixture much better if it is cut in small pieces and melted, rather than grated.

Rhubarb juice is a good substitute for iced tea as a basis for iced fruit drinks.

STORY OF THE WEEK

Taking Advice

By KARL GRAYSON

(Associated Newspapers—WNU Service.)

HARRY EVANS and I had fished that morning along the course of Otter creek, in the fast water below the beaver pond. At noon we sprawled on a grassy bank in the shade of a willow clump and prepared to eat our lunch.

I had finished one of the half-dozen sandwiches with which Harry's wife had filled my haversack, and was beginning to know a deep contentment. It was pleasant sitting there with the clear water of Otter creek rushing by at our feet, with a cooling, fragrant breeze brushing our cheeks, with a plentiful supply of sandwiches at hand.

For a time we sat in silence, concerned only with the business of emptying our haversacks. But presently Harry raised his head and looked across the river. Following the direction of his gaze I saw a man, slowly approaching along the opposite bank. He was an oldish man, gray and wrinkled. The skill with which he handled his fly rod pronounced him an angler of no mean accomplishments.

At length he was directly opposite us, and paused to greet Harry with a familiar salutation. There was a friendliness about the man that held an instantaneous appeal, and when he passed I asked Harry who he was.

"Oh, just an old-timer who lives in a shack up in the woods. Like him?" I nodded, laughing. "Well, I hardly had a chance to study him much, but I must confess there was something about him I liked. He seemed strangely satisfied and contented with life."

"That's it," Harry agreed. "When you run across a chap like that you begin to feel good, an' think that things ain't maybe so bad as they seem."

Harry had about hit the nail on the head, so to speak. The angler's attitude had radiated confidence and he goes on, 'is it that you're after in this life, anyhow, Mr. Shepard? What is it that we're all working for? What is success, anyhow? What is it that we want? Well, I have an idea it's contentment, freedom from worry, peace of mind, appreciation of the little things, a fine, healthy body—things that money won't and can't buy.'

"Old Shepard went into spasms of laughter at this. He couldn't see the doc's point of view at all. 'Just like a story book, eh, doc?' says he. 'Well, listen, you old pill peddler, why don't you follow your own advice and see how you like it? It's all very fine for you to sit here in a nice, comfortable office with all the conveniences of modern civilization at your beck and call and tell some poor cuss like me to go up in the wilderness and hibernate for a year or two. Sure, that's easy. Easy for you. Well, how'd you like to have to leave your business flat? How'd you like to have to take your own medicine? Say, I'll bet you haven't been out of the city once in ten years' time.'

"Doc Harkins didn't have much to say to this. But he stuck to his point. He was a medical man, and he knew that unless old Skinfint got away from business, breathed in some good fresh air and occupied his mind with something else besides stocks and bonds, he couldn't keep going.

"Secretly, old Skinfint knew it, too. He knew the doc was right. Just stubborn, that's all. After the doc departed he sat for a long time thinking. The upshot of it was that he visited three other doctors and was advised by all of them to do exactly the thing that old Doc Harkins had prescribed. And it wasn't long before his physical machine began to slow down and he realized more than ever the M. D.'s had guessed right."

Harry paused and his gaze drifted up the creek to the spot where the old angler was netting in his catch, a fine twelve-inch trout.

"And so," I said, following Harry's gaze, "Old Skinfint finally gave in, eh? He came up here . . . and liked it? Well, I'd always wondered what became of the old man."

But Harry shook his head and smiled. "You guessed wrong, mister. That ain't Old Skinfint. Skinfint never followed the advice of those doctors. He tried to when it was too late. He's dead. Been dead a couple of years. Guess you don't read the papers much."

"Not much more than the market news," I admitted. My eyes were still on the figure of the old angler. "So I guessed wrong, did I? Well, who is the old guy? I'd like to meet and have a talk with him. He looks interesting."

"Him?" said Harry. "Who is he? Why, that's old Doc Harkins. Doc, you see, had sense enough to follow old Skinfint's advice. And as far as I can figure he's getting a lot more out of life than Shepard an' most everyone else."

Electron Microscope

Magnifies 25,000 Times

The greatest extension of human vision since 1677, when Anthony van Leeuwenhoek first focused spermatozoa under his crude lens, is the electron microscope. The electron microscope turns a beam of electrons on a world invisible to light, and in experimental tests, has magnified it 25,000 times, 10 times the top power of the best microscope. First electron microscope available for immediate practical use in scientific research was announced recently by the Camden, N. J. laboratories of the Radio Corporation of America.

The 2,500 useful magnification limit of the best light microscopes is imposed by the nature of light itself. Microscopic details smaller than one-half the wave length of visible light are literally submerged from sight. In the RCA electron microscope a wave length 100,000 times shorter than visible light brings these details into sharp definition.

In operation the electron and light microscopes are closely analogous. A magnetic field, instead of a glass lens, concentrates the beam of high velocity electrons down through the specimen. A second series of magnetic "lenses" steps up the image of final magnification. The image can then be observed on a fluorescent screen or recorded directly on a photographic plate.

'Invisible' Dog Gets License

Assured something was there, in spirit, if not in flesh, the San Diego, Calif., police department recently issued a 1941 dog license to "Spook," San Diego State college basketball team's famed invisible hairless Mexican Chihuahua mascot.

The license tag was added to the collection of identifications which "Spook" has acquired in his existence as an empty harness and a stiff wire leash, well sheltered in a red-and-black doghouse.

When the invisible mascot made a journey east in 1939 all the needs of a lively Chihuahua were religiously met to the bewilderment of porters, bellboys, hotel managers and persons who had been out late the night before.

Hope Is Mainspring

Is it an offense, is it a mistake, is it a crime to take a hopeful view of the prospects of your own country? Why should it be? Why should patriotism and pessimism be identical? Hope is the mainspring of patriotism. — David Lloyd George.

We Can All Be
BUYERS

● In bringing us buying information, as to prices that are being asked for what we intend to buy, and as to the quality we can expect, the advertising columns of this newspaper perform a worth while service which saves us many dollars a year.

● It is a good habit to form, the habit of consulting the advertisements every time we make a purchase, though we have already decided just what we want and where we are going to buy it. It gives us the most priceless feeling in the world: the feeling of being adequately prepared.

● When we go into a store, prepared beforehand with knowledge of what is offered and at what price, we go as an expert buyer, filled with self-confidence. It is a pleasant feeling to have, the feeling of adequacy. Most of the unhappiness in the world can be traced to a lack of this feeling. Thus advertising shows another of its manifold facets—shows itself as an aid toward making all our business relationships more secure and pleasant.

CHICAGO PROFESSOR WARNS AGAINST WAR PROPAGANDA

following outstanding statements:

"World War No. 1 was on the part of Europe at least, not a war to 'Save Democracy' anywhere. It was just another war, with the usual causes and aims. Just think of the 'Democratic Allies' we had in that war: Tzarist Russia and Japan.

"The allies 'won' that war and dictated the peace. But real democracy in Europe has had a hard time of it, indeed. Both that war and that peace gave rise to more and more violent dictators, as well as to a more violent war. Neither at Brest-Litovsk nor at Versailles was there an Abraham Lincoln, with the principle of 'Malice toward none. With charity for all.'

"A foreign policy of our country, radically departing from Monroe doctrine, should not be adopted, thru guile and propaganda, in a period of general fear and hysteria. It should be placed before all the people, with the cards on the table, face up, for their judgment, when men's minds are calm. This is the way of democracy. Leadership by guile, in times of fear, is the technique of the dictator. And our foreign policy should be based on stark realism, on the fact that by and large, the people of all races and nations alike are driven by selfishness and kindness, suspicion and understanding, revenge and justice."

A highly interesting public forum of questions and answers followed the address.
